

A hierarchical tree diagram illustrating the classification of 1000 samples. The root node at the top splits into two main branches. The left branch further splits into two sub-branches, each containing several smaller clusters. The right branch splits into two sub-branches, which then further divide into multiple smaller clusters, some of which are highlighted with thicker lines.

